RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

- July-August 2021: COVID-19, Mental Health, and Legacies of Collective Trauma in the Former Yugoslavia. Conducted ~12 expert interviews in Belgrade, Serbia, and Sarajevo, Bosnia-Herzegovina, on how the mental health impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic in the region were intersecting with the legacies of individual and collective trauma from the violent collapse of Yugoslavia in the 1990s. This work is helping me to update my book manuscript in progress (see Publications, below). This research was given “exempt” status by Northwestern University’s Institutional Review Board.
- 2010, 2012, 2013: Ethnographic fieldwork in Kono District, Sierra Leone. Conducted IRB-approved applied public health research projects in collaboration with medical humanitarian NGO Wellbody Alliance and small Princeton undergraduate teams using participant observation and semi-structured interviews; projects resulted in annual reports with recommendations to NGO partner. Research funded by the Health Grand Challenges Initiative and the Center for Health and Wellbeing at Princeton University. Topics included: posttraumatic stress and chronic pain among war amputees, local concepts and approaches to mental illness, and traditional healing practices.
- 2007-2008: Ethnographic fieldwork in Sarajevo, Bosnia-Herzegovina. Conducted 14 months of participant observation and approximately 100 interviews and focus groups in psychosocial support organizations for doctoral dissertation on the impact of postwar humanitarian psychiatry. Research and writing funded by grants from the International Research and Exchanges Board (IREX), the American Council of Learned Societies (ACLS), and the Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies (PIIRS).
- June-August 2006: Graduate Research Internship in Vukovar, Croatia. Conducted two months of participant observation and literature review as a research intern with the psychosocial support NGO Coalition for Work with Psychotrauma and Peace, as well as over 30 interviews with local community leaders and mental health professionals.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

- Winter and Spring Quarters 2022: During Winter Quarter 2022, I took the one-quarter leave due to Teaching-Track NTE Faculty members every 8 years. I extended this leave through Spring Quarter with two course releases—one for my work as co-Director of Undergraduate Studies for the Global Health Studies program, and one for on-site direction of the Global Learning Office’s study abroad program Comparative Public Health: Serbia and Bosnia-Herzegovina in summer 2022.
  - During these quarters of leave, I worked as a Fulbright Specialist at the Faculty of Political Sciences of the University of Belgrade, Serbia, for two weeks in February and again in April. In each visit, I taught an intensive one-week module (15 hours of instruction) on qualitative and ethnographic methods for social research to ~20 PhD students across a range of social sciences, and then met individually with each student for approximately one hour to consult on research design for their dissertation projects.
  - I also used the leave to revise existing syllabi, begin development of my new seminar in Global Health Studies, “Mental Health and the Arts,” and make progress on my book manuscript about humanitarian psychiatry in postwar Bosnia-Herzegovina.
